

FOLLOW THESE FOUR SIMPLE STEPS TO GET THE BEST RESULTS WITH SIKKENS CETOL TIMBER FINISHING PRODUCTS

- 1 Prepare the timber with a thorough clean, a light sand and allow to dry completely.
- 2 Apply light, even coats with a brush along the timber grain.
- 3 Allow the recommended drying time between coats.
- 4 Regularly maintain for long-lasting beauty and durability. Dirt is easily washed away with a hose.

Keep it real

Crafting timber decks and other structures requires time and effort. Protect your hard work with the new finishing oils and stains from Sikkens

Cracks, dirt and UV fading can wreak havoc on exterior timber. If you've invested time in building a deck, pergola, planter or other structure, you'll need to seal the surface quickly.

The new range of professional-grade Cetol timber-finishing stains and oils from Sikkens is ideal to seal timber decks, cladding, screens and more to maintain their beauty and integrity.

Cetol Deck Ultra is an easy-to-use stain that has no need for a base coat. This cuts down on prep and application times – a bonus whether you're doing the job for yourself or a client. Cetol Deck Ultra can be brushed straight onto clean, bare timber to nourish, seal, colour and protect it from the elements, and has a durable satin finish.

Upon application, Cetol Deck Ultra creates a highly translucent film over timber, with slight pigmentation to enhance the timber's natural beauty and help stop fading in the sun.

If you're after an even more natural look without any sheen, Cetol BL Natural Decking Oil is the only two hour re-coat matt-finish, water-based decking oil on the market. This 'barely there' coating is designed to accentuate the visual softness of timber and let its natural aesthetic shine. The oil penetrates deeply into timber to help ward off the effects of the elements, while the quick-drying formula makes application a speedier process.

For the traditionalists, Cetol Premium Timber Oil gets back to basics. This decking oil is not film-forming, meaning that it highlights the natural character of the timber without masking any of its beauty, for a highly elegant result.
